

BLYTH NEWS

A snapshot of the latest news from Blyth workcats - for owners, operators and interested parties

January 2009 will prove to be another success milestone in the continuing development of Blyth workcats with the launch of our latest model. The asymmetric design brings shallow draft and low wash, combined with great speeds and economy. Designed with many applications in mind the multi purpose catamaran can be used for Water taxis, Windfarm, Commercial fishing, Surveying, Crew transfer and many other uses. Dependant on engine options, speeds in excess of 30 knots are anticipated. The test vessel will be launched with twin Honda 110hp outboards and extensively tested in the Thames in all weather conditions. The design will be available in 9, 10, or 11 metre options with a selection of wheelhouse sizes and layouts. Drive options include, jets, outboard or inboard options. We are now taking expressions of interest with a view to opening the order book after testing in January.

New Blyth—coming to market in February 2009

Asymmetric designed hulls

New 11m during moulding

Hamilton jets built into mould

9m Test boat during fit out

“Diversification proves to be shrewd move”

During these difficult trading conditions in the UK and further a field, diversification in to new markets is the way forward for Blyth. A conscious decision earlier in 2008 to expand the build specifications and operating areas has created international interest and an order book which stretches in 2010. This year Blyth has built and completed its first MCA P6 class vessel, Irish P5 class and exported more than 20% of our builds. The future for 2009 looks extremely positive as the commercial sector and larger projects continue to look to be buoyant. Chin up, head down for the year ahead.

Dutch survey vessel for export during 2009

Coming soon from Blyth;

- 12m Hydrographic survey vessel for export
- 9.9m Commercial fishing vessel
- 14m Windfarm support vessel
- New 9m model
- 10m commercial fishing

“Merry Christmas to all of our customers”

Ho Ho Ho!
All the staff & Directors of Blyth workcats would like to wish all of our customers past & present and a very Happy Christmas and an exciting 2009.

Blyth 10m MCA coded Cancelled order available now